Foraker-Mahone. It is hoping for almost too much for the Democrats of the Union to expect FOBAKES to be defeated for Governor of Ohio next But when we recollect how the Virginia Democrats in 1883 put an end to Ma-HONE rule we may be justified in hoping for the dismissal to private life even of the malignant Forsken. The Cincinnati Commercial Gazette unintentionally paid him a 'Astonishing" is the right word. What sort of men must they not be who four times in succession nominated for Gov. ernor such a person as Foraren? He is lottesville, Va., a few years ago on a stumping tour and then incontinently took to his heels and returned to Ohio.

FORAKEN'S nomination means in Ohio what the nomination of MARONE would mean in Virginia. If the Republicans of Virginia desire to see every Democrat in this State working for the success of his party during the approaching campaign let them nominate Manons for Governor. His nomination would call out an immens vote and cause the defeat of the Republi-can party by a large majority. So in Ohio with FORAKER. He is the most popular Republican in the State with the rabble, and the most unpopular with the leading men of his own party. The Cleveland Plain Ivaler, a sound Democratic paper, says of him that he obtained the nomina tion for Governor "by the basest treachery to party friends, by repeated falsehoods, by despicable trickery"; that in his pretence of not being a candidate for the United States Senate he is as insincere a e was in his repeated denials of his candidacy for the nomination for Governor; that he deliberately stabbed every man who stood in the way of his getting that nomination; and that he will remorse lessly knife every Republican who aspires to senatorial honors. The Plain Dealer

Republican party in Virginia. This object he can accomplish either by running for Governor or by causing himself to be nominated for that office and then decling to accept the nomination. His nomination, tice to President Hannison that Manone is the head and front of the Republican or-ERON, BRADY, FRARIER, the LEWISES, the YOSTS, PENDLETON, HERRMANS, GRONERS, and ill the rest of the kickers that no office will be at their disposal unless they march under Manonz's standards.

tives of the Facing-Both-Ways Republican party. On one side is Ponakur, full of envy, hatred, and all uncharitableness to the southern people; Foranen, who detests "rebels" and would not allow even one "rebel" flag to be returned to the could the "traitors" whom he sees in all the southern Democrats. On the other side is Mahons, a general in the Confederate army, and yet siding with Forsker as against his own people; Manone, who would support the South-hater Forages rather than the South-lover Early for President of the United States.

The Taylor Case. We asked a question last week which has called forth the following interesting letter from A. S. SEGAR, Esq., for which we thank him. It clears up the mystery of the Tax-LOR case. There is no appeal in such a case Appeals of Virginia. Our impression, without examining any authorities, was that the Code provided that notwithstanding its definition of what constituted murder in the first degree a jury might convict a person indicted for that offence of a less offence. Certainly, although section 8662 defines murder by poison, lying to wait, imprisonment, starving, or any wilful. deliberate, and premeditated killing. cempt to commit arson, rape, robbery, the jury guilty thereof, they shall in their verdict find whether he is guilty of murder | dies or gentlemen either, as to that in the first or second degree:

confuse the jury or mislead them into error."

In the light of this decision by this eminent Virginia jurist, whose name is a treasured household word in every Virginia home, there can be no doubt that the verdict in Taylor's case was erroneous, illogical, and illegal. Judge Gunter was compelled to set it saide. Knowing him as if do I can say with coufidence he would never have disturbed it unless he had been compelled by conscience and the law of the land so to do. Having reached this conclusion, what could he do other than discharge her from custody? Judge Moncre says "she was either guilty of murder in the first decree, and the jury by by their verdict had found her guilty of murder in the second degree. Now comes section 4040 of our Code which provides that "if the verdict be set aside and a new trial granted the accused, he shall not be tried for any higher offence than that of which he was convicted on the last trial." She was convicted on the last trial. "She was convicted of murder in the second degree. This conviction, we have seen, was illegal. We have Judge Moncure saying that she is guilty of no offence except nurder in the first degree, and the last trial." She was convicted on the last trial. "She was convicted on the last trial." She was convicted on the last trial. "She was convicted on the last trial." She was convicted on the sam in tried for that offence. The only legal and logical solution was to discharge her from further prosecution.

Another trial would inevitably have led to the same final result. I submit with great deference that section 4040 of our Code should be repealed, and in lieu of it the doctrine as laid down in Briggs's case (82 Virginia, 564) should be embodied into our stainte law. The accused should be held to have waved whatever right he had under the law not to be tried again by obtaining a reversal of the first judgment. If the first trial was a mistrial then there could have been no real jeopardy.

Very respectfully,

Akitron 8. Seoan.

"College Tricks." We would like to see the article headed 'College Tricks," which was printed in our issue of day before yesterday, in the hands of every Virginia parent who has a son or sons prepared to enter college. The article in question describes some of the

What influence such ideas of right and such a system of espoin age are calculated to exert among a body of young men just at the time their characters should be forming and they should be mapping out their careers is not hard to understand. The tendency is to cause the youth to lose his self-respect while at college and make of him a trickster in after life-whether he become a business-man, a

To the Etitor of the Dispuch:

In your issue of Friday last (the 28th) occurs this editorial paragraph: "Judge Gunter's decision in the Taylor case has attracted much attention. Was it a correct one?" In response to your query I beg to refer you to Thornton's case, 24th Gratt., 259. Susan Thornton was indicted for and couvieted of the murder of her hunshand by poison. The case went to the Court of Appeals, and one of the grounds of exception was that "the Cherk failed to charge the jury as to the different grades of homicide." In Taylor's case the main ground of exception was that the Court did charge the jury as to the different grades of homicide and instructed them that they might find the prisoner guilty of murder in the first or second degree, or of voluntary or involuntary manishaghter.
Under this charge the jury found the prisoner guilty of murder in the second degree, and Judge Gunter has set aside the verdict because it is an illegal verdict.

In Thornton's case, cited supra, Judge Moneurs, delivering the unanimous opinion of the court, said: "The charge was murder in the first degree. And if the prisoner was either guilty of that offence or guilty of no offence at all. The law expressly declares murder by poison botonured of the first degree. And if the prisoner was either guilty of that offence or guilty of not first degree. And if the prisoner was guilty of under the prisoner was cither guilty of that offence or guilty of not have had a peculiar advantage, not only the prisoner was cither guilty of that offence or guilty of no offence at all. To have charged the purity to that effect. To have charged the guilty of the murder in the first degree. She could, by possibility, have been guilty of murder in the first degree. She could by possibility, have been guilty of the murder in the first degr been guilty of nothing clse. And it could not, therefore, have been erroneous to charge the jury to that effect. To have charged them as to what constituted murder in the second degree, or voluntary or involuntary manslaughter, or as to the measure of the punishment of each, could have an-swered no good purpose and could have had no other effect, if any, than to LEXINOTON, VA., June, 1832.

While chaptain of the University of Virginia,
I noticed the universally high attack which the Kenmore boys in general took in their classes.
It evidenced their careful and thorough training under Mr. Strode and his choice assistants.

Since then I have been a patron of the school,
It therefore gives me pleasure to testify to the healthy moral tone of the school, its home-like character, and its attention to the religious needs of its members. It is second to none in the State, as a traising school for business, collegiate, or university life.
